It has been proposed that phone and internet companies should be required to retain everyone's data - websites visited, emails, voice calls, social media interactions, and mobile messaging - for 12 months. Police and intelligence agencies would have access to this information, but not to the content of messages or calls, or the exact pages viewed on a website.

Would you support or oppose giving the security forces these powers?

A Russian plane crashed after leaving Sharm el-Sheikh airport last week.

British security forces have suggested it may have been as a result of a bomb in the plane's hold and cancelled British flights to and from Sharm el-Sheikh airport, stranding many British tourists in Egypt. Some flights were resumed this on Friday, but for hand luggage only.
Do you think it was right or wrong to cancel British flights to and from Sharm el-Sheikh?
