Jean Claude Juncker is a former Prime Minister of Luxembourg and has been nominated to become the next President of the European Commission.

David Cameron was opposed to the appointment of Jean Claude Juncker as president and voted against him at the meeting of European leaders at the weekend. Almost all other European countries supported Jean Claude Juncker, meaning David Cameron was outvoted.

From what you have seen or heard, do you think David Cameron has been right or wrong to oppose Jean Claude Juncker?

Realistically, do you think it would or would not have been possible for David Cameron to block Jean Claude Juncker's appointment?

Would - if Cameron had been better at negotiating and building alliances with other EU countries he could have blocked Juncker	14	7	20	22	17	7	20	19	16	11	7	13	15	16	15	13	15	13	16	14	9
Would not - other EU countries supported Juncker and there was no real prospect of Cameron blocking him, however well he negotiated	65	82	59	63	69	80	61	63	70	61	57	59	64	75	68	61	60	66	67	62	72

By Friday morning it was clear that European countries would vote in favour of Jean Claude Juncker, but David Cameron said he still wanted to go ahead with a formal vote. Do you think Cameron was right or wrong to vote against Jean Claude Juncker in this way?

Cameron was right to speak out and vote against Jean Claude Juncker, it was important he said what he thought even though Juncker was certain to win in the end	60	92	41	60	73	84	41	59	60	59	43	55	60	71	63	55	53	64	63	58	50
Cameron was wrong to speak out and vote against Juncker, he was certain to be outvoted and it needlessly damaged our relationships in Europe	20	3	37	28	11	7	36	26	27	14	22	19	21	20	21	19	25	17	20	19	28

Thinking more generally about David Cameron's attempts to renegotiate Britain's relationship with Europe, which of the following comes closest to your view?
