This week the Keogh report into 14 NHS hospital trusts across the country with higher than normal death rates was published, following the emergence of the Stafford NHS scandal earlier this year. The report found some serious failings and eleven trusts were placed in special measures.

From what you have seen or heard, do you think the last Labour government did or did not deliberately cover up failings at NHS hospitals?

Did cover them up - the last government knew about failing hospitals, but covered them up for political reasons	41	69	13	44	72	71	16	33	42	40	23	35	42	52	43	39	44	44	39	37	38

The government have recently announced that they will not go ahead with plans to introduce plain packaging for cigarettes, saying there was not yet enough evidence and they wanted to see how the policy worked in Australia where it has recently been introduced. Other people have suggested the government dropped the plans because they were pressurised by the tobacco companies.

Do you think...

The government probably dropped the policy because they are not yet confident it will work and want more evidence

YouGov Weighting Data

In addition to weighting by age, gender, social class and region (weighted and unweighted figures shown in the tables), YouGov also weighted its raw data by newspaper readership and political party identification:
