With the exception of some extra weighting in London, most public sector employees are currently paid the same rate wherever they work in the country regardless of the level of wages or the cost of living in that area. The government is looking at changing this so that pay rates in the public sector can vary between regions and employees in expensive areas can be paid more than those in cheaper areas. Which of the following best reflects your view?

The government is seeking changes to public sector pensions that will require public sector workers to work for longer and contribute more to their pensions. The government say that with people living longer the changes are necessary to make public sector pensions affordable in the long term. The trade unions say that changes have already been made that make current pensions sustainable. This week many public sector workers went on strike against the proposed changes to public sector pensions.

Do you think the government should or should not go ahead with the changes to public sector pensions?
