From April 2013 housing benefit will be decreased for people who live in council housing or housing association properties that have more bedrooms than the government think they require. This means a couple living in a house with two bedrooms, or a couple with one child but three bedrooms would have their housing benefit reduced by 14%. This is called the "under occupancy charge", but some people have referred to it as a "bedroom tax".

Some people say that many immigrants to Britain play a positive role - bringing skills we need and fresh ideas, starting new businesses, enhancing British culture and helping to keep vital public services going, such as the NHS. As a rough guess, what proportion of immigrants to Britain in recent years do you think are making a positive contribution to British life?

Under European Union law citizens from other European Union countries are allowed to claim benefits if they live in Britain and British citizens are allowed to claim benefits if they go to live in another European Union country. It is illegal to discriminate against other EU citizens based on nationality, but countries can have benefit rules based on residence or past contributions

Would you support or oppose changing the rules on benefits so they are only available to people who have been resident in Britain for a fixed period of time, such as a year?

Stella English, who came first in the Apprentice television contest in 2010 and won a £100,000 job in Lord Sugar's company is currently taking the company to an industrial tribunal claiming she was constructively dismissed.

Miss English claims that she was not given any real work to do, that the job was just "a sham" and she was an "overpaid lackey". Lord Sugar said he thought she had been enjoying her role and felt the "reality of work, rather than the glamour of showbusiness, was beginning to bite with her."

Who do you have more sympathy with?
