Labour leader Ed Miliband has recently apologised for Labour's abolition of the 10p tax rate and said that the Labour party would re-introduce it. Do you think he has done this...

Mainly for political reasons, he doesn't really believe it was wrong but thinks it will win votes

Mainly because he thinks it is the right thing to do, and that the last Labour government was wrong to abolish it

As you may know, there has recently been an investigation into the NHS in Mid-Staffordshire which found substandard care that had led to increased death rates at Stafford hospital between 2005 and 2009. The current head of the NHS, Sir David Nicholson, was the interim head of Mid-Staffordshire NHS Trust between 2005 and 2006. He has apologised to the people of Mid-Staffordshire on behalf of the NHS.

Currently teachers are paid according to national pay scales, based on their experience and duties. There are plans to change this to link teachers pay more closely with how well they perform by, for example, linking pay rises to how good their teaching is assessed to be, or how well their students do in their exams.

Last week, Hilary Mantel, the booker prize winning author gave a controversial lecture that included some comments about Catherine, Duchess of Cambridge. She said:

"Marie Antoinette as a royal consort was a gliding, smiling disaster, much like Diana in another time and another country. But Kate Middleton, as she was, appeared to have been designed by a committee and built by craftsmen, with a perfect plastic smile and the spindles of her limbs hand-turned and gloss-varnished. When it was announced that Diana was to join the royal family, the Duke of Edinburgh is said to have given her his approval because she would 'breed in some height'. Presumably Kate was designed to breed in some manners. She looks like a nicely brought up young lady, with 'please' and 'thank you' part of her vocabulary. But in her first official portrait by Paul Emsley, unveiled in January, her eyes are dead and she wears the strained smile of a woman who really wants to tell the painter to bugger off."

Some people have criticised Hilary Mantel for insulting the Duchess of Cambridge, other people have said that Hilary Mantel wasn't criticising the Duchess at all, but was talking about how the press have represented her. Which of the following best reflects your view?

Hilary Mantel was insulting the Duchess and criticising her appearance

Hilary Mantel was criticising the way the media portrayed the Duchess, not the Duchess herself

As an organisation the RSPCA runs animal hospitals, rescues animals and investigates allegations of animal cruelty. It also campaigns against animal cruelty and for more protection for animals, such as opposing hunting and culls of badgers. Do you think..

Recently the RSPCA spent around £300,000 on bringing a private prosecution against a hunt in Oxfordshire that had broken the Hunting Act by hunting foxes with hounds. Eventually the hunt pleaded guilty and were given a fine. Do you think the RSPCA were right or wrong to spend money on this private prosecution?
