Muslims are only supposed to eat food that is "halal", this means they must not eat pork or blood, and animals for meat must be killed by cutting their throats and allowing their blood to drain out, often without the animals being stunned first. Many restaurants or caterers serve halal meat, either for the convenience of Muslim customers, or because it is of better quality or cheaper price. However, some people think the way animals are killed for halal meat is cruel.

Do you think restaurants and caterers should or should not be required to label food that is halal?
