The government has proposed increasing the cap on university tuition fees to £9000. Students would not have to pay the fees upfront, but would instead pay them using student loans that they would have to pay back as graduates once they were earning £21000. Wealthier graduates would have to pay a higher interest rate on their loans.

Do you support or oppose these proposals?

During the general election the Liberal Democrats campaigned against university tuition fees and some people have accused them of breaking promises by backing tuition fees. The Liberal Democrats have since said that the economic situation means tuition fees are unavoidable. Do you think the Liberal Democrats are right or wrong to go back on their pledge to oppose tuition fees?

MPs are to vote on the planned rises in tuition fees, as set out by the business department, led by Business Secretary Vince Cable, next week. Prior to the election, Mr Cable signed a pledge to vote against any future rises in tuition fees. Vince Cable has now claimed that he could be persuaded to abstain from voting on the future of tuition fees to show unity with his Liberal Democrat colleagues. Some claim that, as the minister in charge of the policy, he should vote for it, whilst others claim that he should honour his pre-election pledge and vote against it.

What do you think Vince Cable should do?
