On foreign visits last week Prime Minister David Cameron controversially called the Gaza strip a "prison camp" and linked Pakistan to "the export of terror". The government have said his speeches were a deliberate attempt to bring new honesty and straight talking to our international relations, but the Labour party have criticised him for being a "loudmouth" who risks damaging relations with British allies like Israel and Pakistan. Which of the following comes closest to your view?

Cameron was being plain speaking, and other countries will respect that	49	81	18	62	55	43	36	43	48	60	55	42	55	53	50	41	40
