Current laws also allow the government to impose control orders on people who they suspect pose a serious terrorist threat, but who they do not have evidence to prosecute. Control orders can restrict where suspects are allowed to go, items they are not allowed to possess, and who they are allowed to see or communicate with. They do not require a trial and there are only limited rights of appeal. Do you think the government should or should not have the power to use control orders?

At this year's general election, the Liberal Democrats opposed control orders and campaigned for their abolition. The Conservative Home Secretary, Theresa May, is now believed to want to keep control orders. Which of these views comes closer to your own?

The Liberal Democrats are part of the coalition; for the sake of national security and government unity, they should now vote to keep control orders	49	76	28	45	72	29	38	50	47	28	41	50	63	50	47	41	56	50	45	37
