The strike action this week has been backed by a majority of those trade union members who voted in strike ballots, but in each case less than half of eligible members voted.

In the PCS civil service union 61% voted in favour, but with a turnout of 32% (meaning 20% of eligible members backed action). In the ATL teaching union 83% voted in favour of strike action, but with a turnout of 35% (meaning 29% of eligible members backed action)

Some people have suggested that the law should be changed so that a union can only go on strike if over 50% of its members back the strike, rather than 50% of those voting. Would you support or oppose this change?

Support - unions should require the support of 50% of all eligible members to take strike action	59	85	41	63	79	42	59	58	60	53	57	56	66	63	53	60	62	55	59	53	59	58	56	62
Oppose - it should be enough for unions to get the support of 50% of those voting	26	7	46	23	11	45	27	31	22	25	23	32	23	25	28	27	23	29	27	28	27	30	36	25

The government is seeking changes to public sector pensions that will require public sector workers to work for longer and contribute more to their pensions.

The government say that with people living longer the changes are necessary to make public sector pensions affordable in the long term. The trade Unions say that changes have already been made that make current pensions sustainable.

Do you think it is right or wrong for the government to ask public sector workers to...

...contribute more of their salary towards their pension?

Thinking about the opposition of the trade unions to the government's reforms of public sector pensions, which of the following best reflects your view?

The trade unions are genuinely concerned about the changes to pensions and their primary motive is to defend the pension rights of their members

	41	16	65	40	19	65	47	42	40	34	37	47	40	41	41	40	38	39	47	41	43	43	44	39

The trade unions' primary motive is to oppose the government's reduction in public spending, and they are just using the issue of pensions as part of a wider battle
