Some people have called on the Government to reverse spending cuts on the armed forces in light of new commitments in Libya. Others however have argued that Britain currently has enough money to fulfil its requirements in Libya and that we need to reduce spending on the armed forces to help reduce the budget deficit. Some people have called on the Government to either restore the use of harrier jump jets or aircraft carriers such as the Ark Royal to help with our foreign policy efforts. By decommissioning the harrier jump jets and Ark Royal the Government will save at least £450m over the next 4 years and £900m in total. To what extent would you support or oppose restoring harrier jump jets or the Ark Royal to military service?

Currently trade unions have to vote in favour of strike action in a secret ballot. Currently the strike is allowed to take place if a majority of the trade union members who vote, vote in favour of strike action. It has been suggested that the law should be changed so that a minimum turnout in the ballot would be needed in order for the result to be valid. Which of the following comes closest to your own view?

A strike should always be allowed if a majority of those voting in a secret ballot support it, regardless of turnout

A government-commissioned report by Lord Hutton, the former Labour pensions secretary, has proposed changes to public sector pensions that will mean public sector workers will have to pay more into their pension, retire later and many will receive less when they do retire. Lord Hutton says the changes will be 'fairer to scheme members themselves and fairer to taxpayers' and others say that, due to an ageing population, the current cost of public sector pensions is unsustainable. However, Brendan Barber, head of the TUC has said the proposals are 'not needed, and will be an extra tax on teachers, civil servants, local government employees, firefighters, nurses and millions of other public service workers.'

Do you support or oppose Lord Hutton's proposals for public sector workers to contribute more to their pensions, retire later and receive a lower pension?

The Government have also announced changes to their proposed NHS reforms. The changes will involve doctors and nurses more in the new GP consortium, will introduce the reforms more gradually, charge the new NHS watchdog with promoting integration of care and only introduce competition if it benefits patient care and choice. Do you think the Government are right or wrong to change their plans?
