It has been alleged that Chris Huhne asked his wife, Vicky Pryce, to take the points on her licence. Mr Huhne and his wife have since separated. Ms Pryce has not confirmed or denied that she took the points on her driving licence.

Do you think Ms Pryce should or should not say whether she claimed to be driving Mr Huhne's car?

Currently in England & Wales people who admit to a crime at the earliest opportunity have their sentence reduced by up to a third. The government have suggested increasing this to 50% to encourage more criminals to plead guilty and avoid trials.

In principle, do you support or oppose offering people who have committed a crime a reduced sentence in exchange for pleading guilty?

In a radio interview this week Ken Clarke, the Justice Secretary, implied that some types of rape were more serious than others, and that date rape was not "serious, proper rape". Mr Clarke has since said that he did not intend to suggest this, and that he thinks all rape was serious.
