Abdelbaset al-Megrahi was convicted of the Lockerbie bombing in 2001 and sentenced to life imprisonment. In 2009 he was released from prison and returned to Libya on compassionate grounds, as he had been diagnosed with terminal cancer and doctors thought he had only a short time to live. He is currently still alive and living in Libya.

Some people have called for al-Megrahi to be returned to Britain to complete his sentence. Others have called for him to be sent to the USA to face trial for Lockerbie in the American courts. Other people think his ill-health means he should be left free on compassionate grounds.

During the 1980s many Western countries, including the UK, cut off normal diplomatic relations with Libya in response to their involvement in terrorism. Under the last Labour government Britain and other Western countries re-established positive relations with Libya in exchange for Colonel Gaddafi's regime agreeing to abandon its programme developing weapons of mass destruction. Libya also agreed to pay compensation to the victims of the Lockerbie bombing.

Do you think re-establishing positive diplomatic relations with the Gaddafi regime was the right or wrong thing to do?

The UK Treasury has secured an agreement with authorities in Switzerland to tax the assets of UK citizens held in Swiss banks to reduce tax avoidance and stamp out evasion. Some people have praised this measure and claim that it will help the Treasury claim a large amount of revenue it would not have otherwise been able to recoup. Others however argue that people with Swiss bank accounts will still be paying a lower rate of tax than they would have been if the money was in the UK, meaning that the Treasury will receive less money than it is entitled to.

The government are proposing changes to the planning system in England. Under the changes the amount of central government rules on planning will be vastly decreased, with local councils given more powers to decide what is allowed to be built in their areas. The National Trust have claimed that the government's plans will give too much freedom to developers and lead to inappropriate building in the countryside. The government have accused them of scaremongering, and claimed that their plans will still protect countryside that is part of the green belt and national parks.
